CB TECH: A TEAM OF GAME CHANGERS

CRIS CARTER HEADS A TOP TIER MANAGED SERVICES ORGANIZATION

Success has been a part of Cris' DNA since his collegiate football days and HOF professional football career. Understanding how successful organizations are built and maintained has carried through to CB Tech. Since 1990, CB Tech has helped Fortune 500 companies and many others with Managed Services In Facilities Maintenance.

As one of the greatest wide receivers in NFL history, Cris scored 130 touchdowns and racked up 1,101 receptions for 13,899 yards (12.6 avg.) in 16 seasons, finishing his career as the NFL's second alltime leading receiver and with the second-most touchdowns in league history. Carter is a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame and the NFL's All-Decade Team of the 1990s.

Cris transitioned seamlessly into broadcasting following his playing career, joining HBO's "Inside the NFL" as a studio analyst in 2002. He moved to ESPN in 2008, appearing on a variety of programs as a studio analyst, including "Sunday NFL Countdown" and "Monday Night Countdown," becoming a fixture on the sports television landscape. From 2017 to 2019 Cris co-hosted FS1's morning show, First Things First.

An Ohio native, Carter attended The Ohio State University where he studied communications and was a first-team All-American and two-time All-Big Ten performer. He has been recognized for his work with inner-city youth, receiving the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award in 1999. He also serves as a mentor in President Barack Obama's "My Brother's Keeper" Program.
